I was born on the outskirts of Seoul, Korea, a Korean war baby. At 2 years old I was adopted by a southern baptist family and spent my childhood in rural Georgia and Alabama. My love of gardening is a gift from my maternal grandmother, a farmer in Alabama. She could grow anything!

I have hitchhiked across the United States, been a playboy bunny, served in the United States Navy as an air traffic controller, earned an undergraduate degree with honors at St Mary's College of Southern Maryland, worked as a book buyer, shown paintings, taught watercolor classes and am now a full time painter and graphic designer living on Whidbey Island, with my partner of many years and our menagerie.
